Korean paper starts

WASHINGTON

Korea Week, which describes itself as an "independent newspaper" and is believed to be the only English-language newspaper devoted to U.S.-Korea affairs, has made its appearance in Washington.

It is a four-page tabloid size publication on slick paper, carrying diplomatic news relating to Korea, reports on the Korean economy and a small amount of advertising by Korean firms.

Po Sung Philip Kim is editor and publisher. He was a Reuters correspondent from 1950-1961, and director of the Korean Information Office in Washington, 1961-1968.
